

BURGLARS HEAR POLICE COMING

Scared Away When Noise of "Rattling" Good Cars Is Heard

NEED NEW EQUIPMENT

Nothing but "Junk Heaps" to Use in Answering Riot Calls, Says Daley

Two autos filled with detectives dashed out of police headquarters about 9:30 o'clock last night in response to a call from 806 South Lawton, saying there were burglars in the house. Miss Anna Collins, returning home after a visit with friends, entered the house but "turned around and ran right out again," when she said, she heard burglars upstairs. No trace of the intruders was found. A man living next door declared thieves had attempted to steal his car out of the garage several nights ago, but were scared away.

Both cars made a heroic struggle to "get there first." Wheeling and spluttering the Buick would take the lead, only to be overhauled and passed by the "rattling" good Ford. The race was called a draw when both cars reached the scene of the alarm at about the same time.

"The police department is badly in need of new equipment," Inspector Daley declared last night. "The present administration inherited several badly worn and battered Fords, which are liable to fall to pieces at any time. We should have at least one standard patrol wagon, properly covered and caged, capable of hauling 12 or 15 prisoners. We should also be provided with a high-powered touring car for emergency calls. Nearly every day riot calls are received—such as the case when the two youthful robbers who held up and shot a grocer on East Sixth street two weeks ago, and then took refuge in a vacant house on South Cincinnati avenue. Of course, all of the so-called riot calls are not serious, but we should have the proper equipment to answer calls promptly with a sufficient force of officers."

Howe brought litigation proceedings against Neal and following the taking of testimony last Thursday before superior court, it was agreed that arguments to the suit would be heard July 5.
